Topic: Quality of Testing: Asbestos

Speaker: Jeff Frazier

Jeff is a practicing industrial hygienist with more than a quarter of a century of industrial experience. In his opinion, asbestos is the most mis-managed public health issue in the history of the United States. Literally billions of dollars were spent to "remove" a potential health hazard that can, and has, been safely managed by knowledgeable and experienced health professionals. Jeff will endeavor to demonstrate that toxicity of any material is always a matter of dose, a hazard can be safely managed.

About the Speaker:

Jeff is an Industrial Hygiene Specialist at the Dow Corning Corporation. He began as his career as an Industrial Hygiene Technologist in June, 1977 at Dow Corning.

Professional Associations

American Industrial Hygiene Association. Diplomate of the American Industrial Hygiene Academy. Michigan Industrial Hygiene Society. Council on Certification of Health, Environmental, and Safety Technologists.

Professional Accreditations

Certified Industrial Hygienist, (CIH), Comprehensive Practice, American Board of Industrial Hygiene. Occupational Health and Safety Technologist (OHST), Council on Certification of Health, Environmental, and Safety Technologists.

Field(s) of Expertise

Comprehensive industrial hygiene practice, which includes expertise in these disciplines:

- (a) Analytical chemistry. (b) Air pollution control technology. (c) Toxicology. (d) HVAC technology. (e) Noise & hearing loss. (f) Personal protective equipment. (g) Health and safety law. (h) Ionizing & non-ionizing radiation. (i) Air sampling and analytical methods research.

In addition, he has specialized knowledge in asbestos analysis and project control, local exhaust ventilation systems design, health and safety training, and compliance and management systems auditing.
